Dear Mrs. Maxton,

Our General Council at their meeting yesterday learned with deep regret of the death of your husband, and have asked me to write to you expressing their sincere sympathy with you and Mr. Maxton junior in your bereavement.

Members of the General Council in their association with James Maxton during his long service to the Labour Movement gained much from his friendship and conceived for him a great affection and respect. The Council paid tribute to his distinguished service in political and public life. He held a unique position in the House of Commons and in relationship to our own organised Movement, and none of us could ever doubt the sincerity of his convictions or his loyal attachment to our organised Movement.

May I add my personal expression of deep sympathy in the loss of one who had
